DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By Edson R. Watie, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT to help make your city grow, you should advertise every good thing in it.

THAT to make your business grow, you should do the same thing. What is good for your city is good for you.

THAT all business men should advertise and then follow it up with more advertising until they increase their business.

THAT they should let the people know what they have to sell.
By so doing they increase their business—increased business means more profits.

THAT the buyers know that they get a square deal from the merchant who advertises.

THAT the people who believe that "a penny saved is a penny earned" read the ads.

THAT the advertiser always anticipates your needs.

THAT the advertiser orders stocks in advance of actual demand and creates the demand by advertising.

THAT buying advertised goods gives a sense of satisfaction.

WHEN YOU BUY ADVERTISED GOODS YOU KNOW WHAT YOU ARE BUYING AND YOU KNOW THAT THEY ARE AS

LOCAL PEOPLE AT SHORT COURSE.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Merritt and daughters, Prof. W. N. Saathoff, Fletcher Davis and several from the eastern part of the county whose names we failed to learn, returned last week-end from a several days attendance upon the annual Farmers' Short Course at A. & M. College.

The course this year attracted some 5,000 people, mostly boys and girls with a large number of women, from all parts of the state. The program was a most interesting one throughout.

The attendance at the Agricultural Writers Conference, in which the writer of this was particularly interested, was not so large but the program was one of the best ever given.

Elsewhere is a report taken from the Dallas News showing the officers elected for the ensuing year, as well as some other notes on the high points of the meeting.

It is an inspiration to attend the Short Course, to mingle with the forward looking men and women who compose its personnel, and most of all the boys and girls. The gentlemanly and lady-like decorum of the Club

Boys and Girls and their wholesome outlook upon life dispels over pessimism about modern youth and convinces one that the future will be safe in their hands. Too much publicity is given to the moral delictels that cumber the great stream of present day youth, and not enough encouragement given to those of sturdier stuff who are steering a safe and sure course in life.

It is to be regretted that a larger attendance can not be had at this great inspirational gathering from among our local people.

L. H. CRABTREE DEAD.

Conscious to the last breath and as unperturbed and unafraid in death as he had been throughout a long life in years, L. H. Crabtree fell into that painless sleep that knows no mortal waking about one o'clock

Friday night following an illness of several days duration at his home near Hondo. His remains were laid to rest in Oakwood cemetery at six o'clock Saturday evening, August 3, 1929, following a brief funeral service at the home of the deceased's daughter, Mrs. J. C. Merriman, and at the grave conducted by Rev. Albert Nelson, pastor of the local Baptist church.

Lenard Houston Crabtree was born in McLennan County, Texas, March 17, 1853. He was reared in Hill

County and moved to Medina County in 1884, thus becoming one of the pioneer citizens of this community.

He has resided here ever since.

When he was only two years old his mother died and at the age of thirteen his father passed away and he was reared to manhood by an uncle. On December 5, 1878, he was married to his boyhood sweetheart,

Miss Fredonia Estes, at Mt. Calm in Hill County. Theirs has been a happy union for over half a century. To them were born six children, three sons and three daughters, five of whom survive their father. One son,

Lenard, Jr., preceded him in death several years ago. The surviving children are Mrs. John C. Merriman,

Stanley Crabtree, Mrs. Frank Killough, all of Hondo; Estes Crabtree of California; and Mrs. Evert C.

Bunch of Somerton, Arizona. He is also survived by sixteen grand children.

TEXAS AND TEXANS

TEXAS AND TEXANS.

By Will H. Mayes

Prosperity Column

Nothing gives a better idea of the financial condition of a country than the reports of its transportation companies. The Texas railroads has a net operating income of $12,520,271

during the five months ending May 31, according to reports made to the Texas Railroad Commission, an increase of $1,954,899, or 18.5 per cent.

All operating revenue, except passenger receipts, showed increases.

This included freight, mail express and other revenue. The decrease in passenger traffic was due to bus competition, which has become strong in every section of the State. The trucks are doing an immense business also, but it is largely short hauls, the effect of truck competition is not so severe.

The alarm once felt about bus and truck competition appears to have subsided. There seems to be room for all to prosper in Texas. The railroads have had more business than they could handle since the movement of wheat began.

Bus Travel Increases

Bus officials report a healthy and gratifying increase in passenger transportation in Texas. In San Antonio alone the number of passengers handled at the Union Bus Station increased almost 100,000 in May, June and July over the corresponding months of last year. The increase throughout the State was probably as great proportionately.

Better roads, better busses, better schedules and better service are bringing better bus business. Business generally is helped by better transportation facilities—that is the business that is enough wide-awake to take advantage of the changing conditions. The other kind of business is fast going to the bad. Business concerns have to keep up with the times or close. This is growing more evident all the time.

Railroads Fighting for Extensions

Railroads are not anxious to extend their lines into sections that are not prospering or giving strong evidence of early prosperity. Practically every railroad in Texas is seeking permission from the Interstate Commerce to extend its lines and its operations. Most of the applications for extensions are being contested by competing lines and in some cases the contests wax warm.

It begins to look like the connecting links will be built in the proposed line from Corpus Christi through San Antonio, Fredericksburg, Mason and

Brady to San Angelo—at least within the next year or two. The Orient line, now a Santa Fe subsidiary, is going into and across Mexico. In other parts of Texas, railroads are seeking new territory. Their business is good, and the prospects are pleasing.

Busses Also Seek Permits

Sixteen applications have been filed for hearing before the bus division of the Texas Railroad Commission at its meeting the first week in August for permits to operate new passenger bus lines. Practically all

WORK RESUMED ON THE ZIG-ZAG NO. 1.

Work has been resumed this week on Zigzag No. 1, 3 miles northwest of town. The original contract called for the Austin chalk, believing that shallow oil and gas would be picked up on top of the Austin chalk. Nothing was found worth mentioning however, and the geologist decided that they had missed the fault or drilled at the wrong location, but after much conferring, the promoters decided to go on to the Edwards, now. So far as we know nothing further has been done on the Bowen well, which was located south of the Yancey road on east side of Black Creek. We understand the block was completed, all parties signing up as requested.

J. A. Bendele drove home a brand new farm wagon Saturday. The first new farm wagon we have seen since a some time. They are scarce now; everybody using trucks.

County Judge Ralph Noonan and County Clerk Seraphin Jungmann of Hondo were Devine visitors one day the past week, inspecting the new buildings here, especially the new courthouse and calaboose.

FROM YANCEY.

The sad news flashed over the wires Monday morning that Grandma Bohmfalk had passed away shortly after midnight. She has been a patient sufferer for many months, and all that loving hands and medical skill could avail was done for her, but death finally laid its cold hand on her and she is now resting in peace where there is no more pain and suffering.

The Epworth League rendered a very interesting program last Sunday night. All the members were present and also a good number of church members. Brother Estes being absent there was no preaching service.

STAGE AND SCREEN NEWS.

RADIO STARS of Station WLS Chicago, seventeen of them are headlining the stage show at the Greater Majestic theatre in San Antonio next week. They are making a tour of the principal vaudeville theatres of the United States with their novel stage presentation, "WLS Showboat, The Floating Palace of Wonder."

Darryl Dean Saddler, famed announcer of the station, acts as Master of Ceremonies, and included in his company are Velma Dean, former San Antonio girl; The Four Jolly Tars, Bob Hope, Tom Corwin, Turner Bros.; Maple City Four, Cleone Weber, Tripoli Trio and others.

On the same program is the inimitable story teller "Dave Vine," one of America's really noted runsters. Dave strolls on the stage, takes off his hat, coat and rubbers carrying on a conversation with the audience all the while. When he has finished, he puts on his hat, coat and rubbers and nonchalantly strolls away. Another strong feature of the show is the act of "days-march and ray."

The screen holds Wm. Fox's Movietone and talking dramatic sensation "Masquerade," an adaptation of "The Brass Bowl" by Louis Joseph Vance.

Alan Birmingham, Lelia Hyams, Clyde Cook and Farren MacDonald are the featured players.

Other features of the Greater Majestic show which starts on Saturday, August 10, include Don Galvan, the Banjo boy, Veron Geyer, at the wonderful Morton organ, Fox Movietone News, and the very popular Aesops Fables. Doors open at 11 A. M. daily. Come anytime after that and see a complete show.

"Unit Shows," so-called for the manner in which they have been assembled with one big headliner and a group of supporting acts, all working in and out of the routine for the entire length of the show, have had their "fling," according to Raymond Willie, managing director of the Greater Majestic theatre in San Antonio. The Greater Majestic has played a number of these vaudeville entertainments, including "WLS Showboat" which is the next week's attraction. But starting the first of September, when the regular Vaudeville season begins, patrons of the Greater Majestic theatre and devotees of "straight Vaudeville" will have their day—for the programs booked at the Greater Majestic for the coming season are scheduled to consist of five big time acts of Interstate Big Time Vaudeville.

CHARLES RAY, Movie star of another day and now a sensation on the Vaudeville stage is booked for a personal appearance at the Greater Majestic Theatre of San Antonio soon. Other notables from the screen to be seen at this magnificent playhouse include Gloria Swanson, Lita Gray Chaplin, Rita Gould and Tom Mix and Tony. Assurances are also that Mae Murray and her band will also be seen.

LUCKY STAR, the latest picture starring Charles Farrell and Jaynet Garrow, recently broke all records for summer business at the Roxy theatre in New York and was held over for a second week. It comes to the Greater Majestic soon.

CATTLE TALKS ARE DELIVERED.

Two Organizations at Short Course Name Their Officers.

COLLEGE STATION, Texas, Aug. 2.—Discussion of problems of the cattle industry held the foreground of attention at the final general session of the twentieth annual farmers' short course at the A. & M. College of Texas Friday. E. W. Sheets, Washington, chief of the animal husbandry division of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry; John C. Burns, Kansas City, Western representative of the American Shorthorn Breeders' Association, and D. W. Williams, head of the animal husbandry department of A. & M. College, were the principal speakers.

"Government and State experiment stations and extension agencies have not gone far enough when they tell the farmer or ranchman which is the better of two or more systems of live stock production," Mr. Sheets said.

Dollars Interest Farmers.

"They must go farther than that and tell him whether either of the systems will make him money or not," he added. "It is true that the farmer works with live stock and that we must talk to him in terms of production. That is his language. But it is equally true that his reward comes in terms of dollars and that uneconomic production and marketing may be worse than none at all."

Henry W. Stanley, director of the merchants' service bureau of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce, was the speaker at Thursday night's session.

Officers of the Texas Agricultural Writers' Conference for the new year were elected as follows: Fletcher Davis, Hondo, president; Henry Ansley, Amarillo, and Mrs. L. R. Campbell, Dallas, vice presidents; Miss Willie Day, Cameron, re-elected secretary.

Heads Club Boys.

Buster Worley, Shamrock, Colingsworth County, was elected president of the Texas United Club Boys' congress for the new year and Jim Potts, Lubbock, was elected vice president.

S. M. N. Marrs, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Austin, was the principal speaker at the final session of the county school superintendents' conference. He discussed new educational legislation passed by the recent State Legislature and declared that the new educational acts represented the "most constructive educational program in forty years" for Texas.

Visitors for the short course were preparing for the return to their home after what was generally characterized as one of the most successful gatherings of the kind in point of attendance and interest ever held here. Many planned to take advantage of special rail rates to spend the week-end at the seashore at Galveston.—Dallas News, Saturday.

A "Chamber of Death" test is your guarantee of FLY-TOX efficiency. The FLY-TOX "Chamber of Death" is a small room in which live, healthy insects are turned loose. They are strong and lively. As they fly and buzz around inside the "Chamber of Death," FLY-TOX is sprayed inside. Less than a teaspoon is used. Almost at once the buzzing stops. Within five minutes all is still. The insects are dead. This test shows you how quick and positive FLY-TOX works. Just what you need for those pesky flies and mosquitoes that bother you now. FLY-TOX is positively harmless to people. WAS SO WEAK HAD TO REMAIN HOME MONTHS

"Stomach trouble and indigestion had me in a terribly nervous, run-down condition. I was so weak and worn out I would have to stay in the house for months at a time. Constipation was helping to make my life miserable and there were times when I didn't care whether I lived or died. A good friend of mine told me about Sargon and how much it helped her so I decided to try it.

"What a blessed relief it is to be free of the troubles that worried me for 12 long years. The Sargon treatment has literally made me feel like a new woman. My stomach is now in perfect condition; my appetite is fine and I eat just anything I want, without any ill effects. My nerves are back to normal and I sleep sound and get up feeling just fine. Sargon Soft Mass Pills ended my constipation without ever griping or nauseating me. "I'm so happy over regaining my health that I'll be glad to tell anyone what Sargon has meant to me. Just have them 'phone 2-7783 if they want to know what I think of this wonderful treatment."—Mrs. W. H. Higgins, 507 W. First St., Fort Worth.

Sargon represents the dawn of a new era in the field of modern medicine. It is turning old-fashioned moss-grown health theories upside down and is restoring countless thousands by methods undreamed of only a few years ago.

DAILY.
CINNAMON ROLLS A SPECIALTY.

Hinckley had a suite of offices in the building of the Crystal Springs Water company. He turned over to Caleb one of these rooms with its draughting equipment, and there Caleb worked hard over his plans while Hinckley, with the engineering staff, was making fuller investigation across the bay with a view to confirmation of the project. Options were already being carefully negotiated. A few days should see the deal assured and actual work commenced in the field.

Caleb caught only a glimpse or two of Mary Morgan. Cox's offices where she worked in her capacity of assistant to the president's secretary were on another floor from Caleb's room. He knew, through his bank, that she had received the money, he imagined that she had given notice to the company and was waiting for its expiration before going away.

Baxter had seemingly dropped out of sight. Caleb had changed his living quarters at the beginning of the month, which was a week after the meeting in the canyon, and he had not met him, though he had occasionally heard him leaving or entering his room, or moving about it. He knew that Baxter was "posted" on the delinquency board at the Altruists for dues and dining-room chits. It was plain that the sale of Hermanos valley had fallen through.

Cox came one morning into Caleb's office and discussed general progress for a few moments before he took a seat across from the high stool on which Caleb worked at his drawings. "You've had a falling out with Baxter?" he said abruptly. "He's after your scalp and seems to be tolerably cocksure he's going to get it," he went on, not waiting for comment. "He came to me this morning with a proposition that involved, with our acceptance of it, your dismissal, or at least the relegation of you to a subordinate position, so far as your identification with the project is concerned. I was busy and I made an appointment for three o'clock. I should like you to be present."

"You've Had a Falling Out With Baxter?" He Said Abruptly.

"Thanks," said Caleb. "I'll be very glad of the opportunity."

He did not offer and Cox did not seem to expect any explanations. He could not tell exactly what Baxter had for weapons but he rather fancied he knew the principal one that would be employed—and he was ready with a parry that would prove a bit disconcerting. This weapon was a boomerang he had long known the existence of and looked forward to seeing it launched only to return, and strike the thrower. It was only since his talk with Mary Morgan at Haight's that he had considered Baxter as likely to use it.

Baxter was the type of man who would never blame himself under any conditions. To the score against Caleb he would undoubtedly set the denial of the loan, the loss of the Hermanos valley sale, his dismissal by Betty Clinton on the night of her father's sickness and death, and the fight on the bridge in which he had been first worsted and then rescued by Caleb. The rescue would be an ignominy. It was doubtful whether Baxter had been normal since his mother's marriage. His brain had been under stimulation or depression of alcohol—practically continually. He had brooded over his reverses and now Caleb was placed as sole author of all his troubles, the target of his vindictiveness against conditions.

Prepared as he was in a measure for the interview, it struck him that here was a test to see how far he could depend upon Cox where the company's best interests were at stake. Cox knew about the boomerang. It was the decent thing for Cox to do to ask him to be present. Mighty decent.

Caleb's face was grim when he entered Cox's office at three o'clock, his eyes were narrowed and his lean jaw jutted, bossed with tense muscles.

Cox pushed over cigars with a greeting genially modulated as usual. There was a difference, though; Cox's eyes were cold as shadow ice. As Caleb lit his cigar in his chair the buzzer sounded and Cox took up his desk phone with a little nod at Caleb. The nod was confidential—warning, despite the frosty eyes.

"All right, show him in," he said. Baxter entered, jaunty, well-dressed, his head held confidently. But he looked the worse for wear, for all his mien. He smelled of the barber shop, but massage had not changed the flabbiness of his putty-colored flesh nor taken the rings from beneath slightly bloodshot eyes. He stared hard at Caleb and then sneered.

Again Caleb recollected Field's prediction. It looked as if it was swiftly coming to pass. Baxter's eyes had lost humanity; there was no more soul in them than there would have been in artificial orbs of transparent glass back of which crimson light was burning. The sneer was more of a snarl, that of a beast. His whole face was animal.

"I understood this was to be a confidential interview," he said.

"Quite right, Baxter." Cox's manner was crisp. "Mr. Warner is entirely in our confidence. Sit down."

"Oh, very well. I take it that Mr. Warner knows all about my interest in my friend Thompson in connection with this matter. An excellent engineer, I believe."

Neither Cox nor Caleb answered. Baxter drew a long envelope from his inside pocket with a bit of a flourish. Cox's eyes fixed upon it. He fancied that this was the boomerang.

"This company has got to have Hermanos valley for its reservoir. Hermanos canyon at its head for its dam site. Never mind where I got the information. There's a model in your directors' room that proves my assertion." For a moment he faltered. Cox and Caleb had exchanged glances. Baxter seemed suspicious of them.

"I've got the privilege of sale on that property," he went on. "For one year, and thereafter until revoked by the parts of the first part. Now deceased. It is an option-contract. Binding on the heirs and assigns of the late Captain Clinton. I'm going to offer it to the company at a fair price—with the stipulation already stated to you concerning Mr. Thompson. Here's the agreement. The price to me, as you will see, is one hundred and twenty-five dollars an acre. My price to you, one hundred and fifty. A fair profit and a fair price. No chance for condemnation proceedings." He handed the document to Cox, who ran swiftly over the two pages, refolded it and passed the paper to Caleb.

Caleb's face hardened as he read. The essence of the contract, as it applied to the situation, was that in it Baxter was given permission to sell the land without reservation as to its uses, for any purposes, without mention of the ranch-house—or of the little cemetery where Clinton himself now lay buried.

"That's my hand," said Baxter. "Your play, Cox. But this thing has got to be settled immediately. Or—I go to Oakville."

Cox took the paper refolded by Caleb as the latter laid it on the desk and he handed it back to Baxter.

"Doesn't interest us," he said.

Baxter's jaw sagged. He checked a "What?" by biting his underlip as Cox went on:

"So far as the Crystal Springs Water company is concerned, so far as any water company is concerned, that carbon is not worth the paper it is typed on."

Baxter had braced himself and managed a laugh as he leaned forward.

"I'm not here to bluff," he said. "Why isn't it?"

"I'll tell you, if you insist." Cox spoke as if he had already dismissed the matter and talked only out of bored politeness. "You got information about our project, Warner's preliminary prospectus and the model in the next room, through leaks in this office. There are leaks in every office. We guard against 'em. Warner found out long ago that the bed rock, as the side formations in Hermanos canyon are not structurally able to support an imposing dam."

"He gave up the idea of that dam site, but we didn't bother to change the model. The details of Warner's amended plans were submitted to us and we approved of them. But those details, transcribed by a man whom I can absolutely trust—my own secretary—were not filed where anyone might get a look at them—as was the case with the original prospectus. They were filed back of you, Baxter. In that steel cabinet, here in my own room, under a key that I alone hold. No leaks from that, my son. I repeat, we are not in the least interested in your option."

The boomerang had struck its wielder. Baxter looked from one to the other, a muscle twitching high up in one cheek. His glance lingered venomously on Caleb, who had outwitted him.

"So that's your joker card, is it? Well, I've got one to match it. Cut this out." He put the paper away, and stood up. "Don't forget I've got enough information to interest Oakville. I've got an idea they'll block your project. You won't be able to buy up your lands on the quiet. I'll attend to that even if Oakville doesn't take hold. Though I fancy they will and pay me for the information, too. I'll put the ranchers wise and I'll boost the price of Caliente Sink and all the watershed until the cost will swamp your scheme at the outset." He whirled on Caleb with a snarl.

"And you'll lose your big stake and your job at the same time, Warner, for all your cleverness. Good morning—and be d—d to both of you!"

Baxter, starting for the exit, stopped short as it opened abruptly. He stared and faltered as Mary Morgan came swiftly in and shut the door, leaning against it. Her face was white save for two spots of red, her blue eyes were menacing as she fixed them upon Baxter and her breast heaved tumultuously while she took some papers from inside her blouse and held them tight gripped.

Baxter made a sudden move toward the girl, his eyes fixed on the papers she held as if he had suddenly become suspicious of them. She held out one hand against him.

"Mr. Warner," she said, her breath coming short, "please give these papers to Mr. Cox."

Caleb took them wondering, though he sensed the culmination of an act in the drama between Baxter and this girl, a scene in which he was on for a purpose, together with Cox. She stood fast in front of the door, her arms spread, her fingers clutching the outside of the frame on either side. Baxter strode toward her.

"This doesn't interest me," he said. "Get out of my road."

"No!" The monosyllable was an explosion of loathing and contempt. Baxter recoiled a little before the girl. The blonde stenographer was an embodiment of hatred and of determination.

"Not until Mr. Cox has read those papers and heard what I am going to say."

Caleb looked at Cox and the latter nodded slightly in understanding.

"All right, Miss Morgan," said Caleb. "You needn't stand by the door. Mr. Baxter will stay."

She looked at him and read his face, then moved away a little while Caleb lounged against the door panels and Baxter retreated before the fury that the girl manifested. Cox looked at his transformed stenographer through half-closed lids. He had not yet read the papers.

"I don't imagine you hear office gossip, Mr. Cox," she began, "but almost everyone in your office knows that I am going to have a baby. This—Baxter—is its father. He has promised a score of times to marry me or to give me money enough to go away. He preferred the latter. And his promises were like himself, worthless!"

Baxter looked away from her scorn, first at Cox, sphinxlike in his chair, then at Caleb guarding the door with an air of willing readiness to oppose his exit. He had lost his poise. He cringed under the whip of her words and attitude. Then he tried to brave it out, with a sneer that lacked definition.

"This sort of stuff . . ." commenced Baxter.

"Keep quiet." The order from Cox was so brusque that the lesser spirit quailed. "Go on, Miss Morgan."

"Baxter came to me," continued the girl, "some time ago with a form of option that he wanted me to type. In it Captain Clinton agreed to sell for farming purposes only; he reserved the ranch-house and some few acres from all sale. It was to be typed in duplicate and I made an extra carbon, which I kept. You have it there. I kept it for reference. But when he brought me a blank form the day before yesterday, with the name of Captain Clinton and a witness already signed, when he asked me to type in the manuscript text that he supplied and to do it so carefully that it would look as if the signatures had been naturally made. In spaces coming at the right distance from the conclusion of the typing, it was not hard to know that something was wrong—that Baxter had practiced those signatures on blank sheets until he had got them perfect. This option had no reservations. He did not want a carbon of that—no copy of it will be found among Captain Clinton's papers. But I made a carbon, the second paper that you hold, Mr. Cox."

Cox had glanced over the documents as the girl made her points and now he laid them down.

"You suspected the signatures were forgeries? You knew Captain Clinton was dead?" he asked.

"Yes." She spoke half defiantly. "I knew that. I have done more than that. I gave Baxter information I got in the office here. I did it all because, up till then, I wanted him to marry me. He swore that he would if I typed this last contract. He said it would bring him in a lot of money. That the signatures were genuine. I didn't challenge that because . . ."

For a moment she wavered but caught herself up.

"But I didn't trust him. That is why I made the second carbon. When I asked him to go with me and get our license, he laughed at me. Then I did accuse him of forgery. He said that if it was, Clinton would not rise from the dead to dispute it, that no one could detect it, that the witness only signed with a cross and could not read what was in the option. And that I was just as deep in it as he was. I suppose it was criminal. I have resigned my position here. I have played false to the company. You can do whatever you want with me. I do not mind punishment as long as he has to share it."

Baxter winced. The girl was in deadly earnest.

"How about it, Baxter?" asked Cox. "A mess of lies. She's cooked it up because I won't marry her. And I wouldn't because I am as doubtful of the paternity of the child as she affects to be of the authenticity of the option."

"Oh!" The girl stood rigid, her hands changed to talons. Baxter took a swift step back. Caleb came from the door, his fists doubled. Then Cox, coming out from behind his desk in rapid movement, caught her as she tottered and helped her to a chair, where she collapsed, sobbing hysterically.

"Both those options are genuine," blustered Baxter. "I defy you to prove them otherwise. I got the second one from Clinton after my land deal fell through. He was anxious to realize on his estate."

"You admit the two documents?" Cox's words were crisp.

"Certainly. And now we'll leave Miss Morgan and my personal affairs out of it. If you haven't anything more to say, our proposition stands as it did. You'll hear from Oakville, or from me through the press. You can't bully me, Cox."

Cox leveled his forefinger at Baxter, his eyes steely, his words driven home like the blows of a hammer.

A definite reason for extra value in our USED CARS

WHEN you buy a used car you should be sure the price is not put above the actual worth of the car, to allow the dealer to recoup an excessive trade-in allowance.

Under the Ford policy there is no incentive for this sort of practice—for the price of the new Ford car is so low, and the value so high, that unreasonable trade-in concessions are hardly possible.

We allow the buyer of a Model A just what his old car is worth—and we offer that used car for sale on the same basis. Model T Fords are reconditioned throughout and guaranteed. QUIHI vs. SCHUH GROCERY

QUIHI DIAMOND

Come and See a Snappy Game.

ANDREW SCHUEHLE.

As briefly stated in last week's issue of the Anvil Herald, Mr. Andrew Schuehle, a prominent and highly esteemed citizen of Hondo, passed away suddenly last Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Schuehle was apparently in good health and circulated about on the streets with friends in his customary way Thursday afternoon. Toward evening he engaged in a friendly game with several friends and while thus engaged suddenly collapsed as a result of heart failure. His death was a shock to many and brought sorrow and sadness to many relatives and lifelong friends. His funeral took place the following afternoon. As a mark of respect to the dead, the business houses of the city closed for the occasion and a great concourse of people gathered at his home and also at the new Quihi cemetery, where the interment was had, to pay him their last tributes of love and respect. The floral offerings were so many and many of them so exquisitely and beautiful that the grave was literally hidden by them from view. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. C. P. Hassel of the Quihi Lutheran church, of which Mr. Schuehle was a life-long member and at one time a trustee. The impressive services at the cemetery and grave were conducted under the auspices of the Masonic lodge of Hondo, of which Mr. Schuehle was an honored member. The Quihi gun club also appeared in a body and paid its customary last tribute of respect to the departed member. The pall bearers were practically all nephews of Mr. Schuehle. They were: Sheriff Chas. Schuehle, Rolle Schuehle, Geo. Schuehle, Andrew Eckhardt, Nick. Baby and Jacob Reily. From the bituary read at the service the following data relative to Mr. Schuehle was gathered: Mr. Schuehle was born of Christian parents March 27, 1859, at Berwangen, Baden, Germany. Here he was baptized and when about 4 years old was confirmed in the Lutheran church at Niefern, Baden, Germany. As a lad of 16, he came to America with his parents and Texas became his future home. Here in Medina County he grew up to manhood and became a farmer and ranchman and for some time was also engaged in business at Quihi. He retired about 7 years ago and moved to Hondo. When a young man he entered into marriage estate, November 13, 1880, with Miss Engelina Frerichs. Six children were born to his union. Of these the following survive him: John G. Schuehle, Mrs. Mirl Baby and Mrs. Robert Gott of Sturm Hill and Mrs. Willie Eckhardt of Hondo. He is furthermore survived by 17 grand children and 4 great grand children, and also by two brothers, and two sisters, namely: by Henry Schuehle, Sr., of Sturm Hill, and August Schuehle of Hondo and Mesdames Louise Kiefer of Cliff and A. H. Balzen of Sturm Hill. Having lost his wife by death January 3, 1924, he entered into a second marriage, and this time with Miss Gontine Guly of D'Hanis who survives him here in Hondo, and with many friends who mourn his departure. Peace be to his ashes. The Anvil Herald joins the many friends in most every part of Medina County in extending sincere sympathy to the bereaved widow and relatives at the great loss they have sustained in the death of Mr. Schuehle.

SABINAL BEATS D'HANIS

THREE OF FIVE GAMES

SABINAL, Tex., Aug. 5.—The sabinal Hustler defeated the D'Hanis Pirates at D'Hanis Sunday to make it three out of five for the season.

The game was hard fought throughout, the squeeze play accounting for two of Sabinal's runs and a hit batsman with the bases loaded brought in the initial marker.

Nester was shaky at the start when Griffin walked, Peters sacrificed, Dobbs walked and Thornberry and Owens were hit by pitched balls. Arnim squeezed in Dobbs before the side was finally retired.

Griffin with a walk and three singles led both teams in hitting. McNair and Mueller got two hits. Double plays and strikeouts kept down the score and some fast fielding by both infields also helped. Thornberry fanned eight and Nester three.

Next Sunday Sabinal goes to Castroville to try to make it two straight, having shut out the Indians in their first game 2 to 0 with one single.

LAND THE BEST INVESTMENT.

Someone voiced a truth once when he said:

"People are growing more numerous all the time, but the forces of Nature are not creating any more land."

The man who made that remark may not have realized that he was voicing a significant truth. It may not have occurred to him that he said, indirectly, however, that land values will increase just in proportion to the manner in which the soil is harnessed to supply the wants of man.

No odds what he means, what he had in mind that prompted that remark, it was significant and contained a great economic truth.

The landed area of the world is not growing any larger, but it is growing more populous. The wants of men are becoming more varied. More than 90 per cent of these wants must be supplied from the soil. The land must be made to produce more and a wider area must be touched with production. It must remain the base of all wealth—continue to hold that stable value that can not be destroyed—that subtle something that contains all the elements of life, both vegetable and animal.

Throughout the ages it has been the producer of wealth. The only reason it has been cheap in this country is because it has been so plentiful. But the time has come when it is not plentiful. There are just as many acres as ever, but there are more people to tenant them—more to be fed, clothed and provided for from what they produce. It is this demand that has made land scarce and created a call that was not present some years ago.

The world is calling upon the land for more—greater production. This is a universal cry growing largely out of the destruction of war. The nearest approach to virgin soil in the world, is in the United States. Here lies the land that is capable of maximum production. Vast areas of this are in Texas. And it would seem that the Creator has held it ready to meet the call of the world for more—to respond to the demand for food—more of everything the world needs. It must be touched into the greatest possible productivity, activity. It is ready and nature appears to have comprehended the call and it has been seasoned with moisture ready to respond to inspiration of the hoe and the plow—the old-fashioned utensil and the modern tractor. Not alone the circumstances of the times, but the doings of men in the remote corners of the world have contributed toward bringing about an increase in land value here.

No logic—not even the hoarse roar of the pessimist—can sustain an assertion that land does not present the most profitable field for rational investment.

For years Texas has been in the dawn of the morning of a better day. Today is the sunrise on the soil—that broad glow of prosperity that has come as a result of a new and broader demand from all corners of the world where men are facing a deeper light—that light and righteousness that has been the outgrowth of occidental civilization, where men have learned the formula for right living. They have taught this to the sons of men in peaceful ways for years, and this country has grown to be the greatest on the face of the globe.

Briefly, Texas has the land on which merely the fringe of production has been touched. There is a new call to the soil. Texas will answer that call as it should be answered, and in this answer will lie increasing values for lands are valuable only in proportion to their production. Everything here contributes to expanding values—climate, virgin soil and the new activities of men and women growing out of the experience of the past years.

We must not forget the fertility of the soil which is more valuable than gold. Here in Texas very little fertilizer is being used at present time taking into consideration the area that is in cultivation, but in some places in Texas where the land has been in cultivation a number of years and where one crop has been raised year after year it is starting to show lack of fertility. The reckless farming of cotton at the lowest possible price, has benefited only foreign, and has depleted some of our best farms in Texas. It is time to stop this unsafe farming and it can be done, but how? "By diversifying,"—raise different crops, carry more stock on the farm, and guarantee the farmer a living wage. A farmer in Texas raises cotton because it is a ready money crop, he would just as soon raise any other crop if he could get a market for that crop. There are many different crops that can be raised in the United States and Texas, which are imported into this country, because these crops can be raised by cheap labor in other countries and imported into this country at lower price than our farmers can raise it. By raising such crops as corn, feed and hay crops and vegetables, the cotton crop will be reduced considerably, and cotton will bring a better price, which will in turn make more prosperous farmers who in turn will buy more manufactured articles. If a tariff on industrial products is good for the manufacturer, why is not a tariff on agricultural products good for the farmer?—Southwest Farmer and Investor.

Carbon disulphide is the best material to control the black weevil, or rice weevil, attacking stored corn. This insect causes a loss in the Southern and Gulf States alone of several million dollars annually in each state. Carbon disulphide can be poured directly on the corn without injury. Care should be taken to keep it away from fire in any form, since the vapor is highly inflammable.

Will there be a power to suppress the findings of Hoover's Crime Commission as there was to suppress those of Roosevelt's Rural Life Commission?

What Happens

when you step on the gas?

To most people, all gasolines look very much alike. It is only when you call on your motor for its best performance that you discover the difference between them.

Then—those cars which have Humble Flashlike Gasoline in their fuel tanks are away in a flash! No need to bother with starting in "low"—powerful Humble Flashlike Gasoline shoots you ahead in "second"—a quick shift to "high" gives you added speed—then—you slip into the coveted position—out ahead—the open road before you!

There's no sputtering or choking. You enjoy a smooth, resistless thrust which leaves other cars behind—sputtering and fuming to a jerky start—like race horses left at the post.

Study the specifications of Humble Flashlike Gasoline given below. You will readily see why this superior-made gasoline gives such out-of-the-ordinary results. Humble Flashlike Gasoline may be bought at stations wherever you see the Humble Signs.

COWPEA IMPORTANT IN EN- RICHING LIGHTER SOILS.

College Station.—In Many sections of Texas, particularly where lighter soils prevail, crop yields are very materially and profitably increased by growing cowpeas and turning under green, so hundreds of demonstrations are showing. In general farming sections this practice is usually regarded as too expensive of land, time and money if the land is exclusively occupied with peas during the summer months. In such regions they are often drilled between the corn rows when the crop is knee high, or planted in the third row in the two-row-and-skip-one plan or sowed after oats or wheat as a catch crop. Livestock are often used to graze these fields after the corn or grain sorghum crop is gathered, with profit to both the stock and the land.

"The two-row-and-skip-one method with cowpeas in the wide row," explains E. A. Miller, agronomist in the Extension Service, "is being widely demonstrated in many parts of West Texas. Every third row is left blank when grain sorghums are drilled, and later in the season if moisture permits, cowpeas are planted down this open row. Demonstration in Martin and other counties of the West testify to larger yields the year following this practice.

"In East Texas, on the other hand, the velvet bean is most favored for inter-cropping with corn, although cowpeas and soy beans are all utilized for this purpose. Franklin county farmers are among those using velvet beans very successfully in this way, turning under the entire corn stubble and bean crop in the fall.

"The growing of cowpeas on the land for the sole purpose of turning under is used most extensively in South Texas where intensive farming prevails in certain sections. This system was almost universally established in Dimmit county a few years ago following county agent demonstration which showed that old onion land planted to cowpeas during the summer yielded onion yields the next year. In Cameron county the practice is coming rapidly to the front, with 1800 acres thus planted last year. W. R. Macomb harvested 93 sacks of Irish potatoes from old cowpea land this spring, and only 78 sacks on old corn land. He says it paid, for he made $29.88 per acre more on the enriched land."

CONSIDER THE HOG!

Many dead or crippled hogs arrive at the stockyards each year—a loss that can be largely avoided by proper handling of the swine before shipment, the U. S. Department of Agriculture believes. When ready for market, hogs should be brought to the loading pens long enough before shipping to get rested, and kept in comfortable pens without crowding. If they are driven to the loading point they should not be rushed on the way; if they are hauled, too many should not be crowded together. Loading chutes should be made, not too steep, and with protected sides. Bedding should be provided in the cars, which should be free from broken timber, nails, and other material likely to cause injury. Crowding en route, particularly in hot weather, may result in some of the hogs dying. Loading the animals after a heavy feeding is injurious. There is nothing to be gained in added weight by forced feeding just before shipping. The aim should be to get as many hogs as possible to the stockyards in good condition.

A RESOLVE.

To stand by one's friend to the utmost end.
And fight a fair fight with one's foe;
Never to quit and never to twit,
And never to peddle one's woe.
—C. K. of A. Journal.

POINTERS ON MANAGING THE ANGORA GOAT RANGE

Ideal range for the Angora goats should possess suitable forage at all times of the year, be well drained and free from continued heavy rains, and be abundantly supplied with watering places and suitable bed grounds, according to W. R. Chapline, in charge of range research, Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture.

As browse furnishes much of the forage for goats on the ranges, and in the winter is the principal goat feed, an abundance of good browse should be available. Some important browse plants of high palatability are mountain mahogany, the bluebrush of the Pacific coast, Fendler ceanothus of the Rocky Mountains, fendler, bitter brush, and service berry. The oaks are less palatable but important browse plants in the West. It is also essential to have succulent grass and weeds for does kidding time during the summer.

Good management includes conservative stocking, dividing the range so as to afford the best feed during each season, and obtaining as nearly even utilization of all parts of the range as possible. The grazing capacity of a range area is the number of animals which may be carried in it year after year without injury to the forage and with sufficient palatable feed. An average of approximately 4 acres of the grass-bush type and from 3 to 6 acres of the true-bush type can be allotted to each goat for year long grazing.

Reduction in the quantity of palatable forage, increase in nonpalatable plants, stubby appearance in the browse species, and thin goats are signs of overgrazing. Overgrazing areas should have the number of animals reduced so the palatable forage plants will not be injured; and, if possible, such areas should be protected from grazing until after the main forage plants have matured seed. Open, quiet herding, and the bedding of the goats on a new ground every night are recommended.

Mr. Chapline discusses the management of goat range in more detail in Miscellaneous Circular No. 50—M, The Angora Goat and Mohair Industry, recently published by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Many a valuable sire in the swine herd is sent to the block too soon when the practice is followed of using a boar one season and then marketing him, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture. A boar in the breeding herd should not be discarded until the growing and feeding qualities of his progeny are determined in the feed lot.

A feed hopper is not the proper place for a hen's feet, and an open-box type of hopper with a revolving reel above the feed to keep the hens from getting their feet into the mash is much better than a wall hopper. Place the hopper up off the floor so as to save floor space and to prevent the mash from getting damp.

A SHOWER OF NOTIONS.

By Juliette Frazier

A shower of notions is sure to be greatly appreciated by a young bride-to-be, especially if her future is to be in the country where stores are not close at hand. It will provide some of the many small things that are apt to be forgotten in the larger preparations for the wedding and the new home.

The list of articles is large, including any of the following items, and others that are not mentioned here: Needles and pins of all kinds, fine wire hair pins, mesh caps, side and back combs, buttons of different size (of kinds used on underwear and wash dresses), darning materials, tapes of different kinds and widths, strips of woven initials, trimming braid, threads (the commoner kinds in boxes of a dozen each), sewing silks, embroidery silks and cottons, bolts of colored lingerie ribbons, beauty pins, garter elastic, scissors, a button bag, pin cushions, sachet bags, unscented toilet soaps, pencils, small pads, etc.

A pretty way to present the little parcels, which are, of course, wrapped in tissue paper and tied with pretty ribbons, is in card-board waste paper baskets, of which anyone can easily use three or four, tying the basket together with a huge bow of ribbon in the bride's favorite colors. The place-cards at the refreshment table may be inscribed with the old nursery rhyme:

"Needles and pins, needles and pins,
When a man's married, his trouble begins."

The refreshments may be served picnic style, a little basket filled with "notions" being given each guest, and certain articles like the salad, the coffee, and the ice cream being served in bulk on the dining-table. Each basket could contain different sandwiches wrapped in paraffin paper, different cookies and cakes, a pickle, some candies, nuts and fruit.

"When I'm a man—" began Bobbie after a stormy interview with his father.

"What will you do?" asked his mother.

"I'll name my boy after papa. And oh!—how I'll spank him!"

One or two poor-quality or under sized vegetables in a bunch give the others a bad reputation. Bunches of vegetables for the market should be of good quality, regularly sized and well graded.

D'HANIS, Tex., Aug. 5.—The first bale of the 1929 cotton crop was sold here Saturday. August 3. It was raised on the Carle Cattle Company farm a few miles south of town, ginned by Carle Gin and Milling Company and sold to Louis Carle at 20 cents. The bale weighed 452 pounds.

Prospects for a good cotton crop are poor, as the farmers have resorted to poisoning without materially checking the ravages of the boll weevil and the boll worm. S. A. Express, Monday.

LION ROARS.

Lions Have District and County Attorneys as Their Guests.

Acting President Lion Knopp opened the regular luncheon at the Armstrong Hotel. President Dillon was unable to attend on account of business. We Lions are glad that one member can and always is willing to help when the club needs him.

On account of Lion Stiegler being sick the Lions had to vacate their regular Den, but hope for quick recovery of Lion Stiegler in the near future. The Charter program will be held at the Armstrong Hotel Thursday night at eight o'clock.

Lion Barry proposed a plan for the yard contest which was readily accepted by the club. There will be a grand prize of $25 and $10 each for the best front yard, back yard and church or school yard and anyone winning the grand prize is not eligible for any of the others.

Lion Geo. and Sheriff Schuehle were appointed on the program committee for the next regular meeting.

County Attorney Brown of Devine was the main speaker of the day. His time being limited he gave the Lions a disappointment after he started for he made them roar more than once with his humor. One bit of advice which would be profitable to the club was that each Lion work alone on the outside and then come together and pull, then the club could have more strength in its work. The verse which he gave in the closing of his speech may be worth while to the club if each member will study it closely; May the lair o' the Lions Like the land o' the Leal Be ever the home of the true Where each one is trying And all are uniting To perform all the good they can do.

Then here's to the club o' them Every damn man o' them Always square in the game, May the efforts of each And the efforts of all Be crowned with success and acclaim.

District Attorney Woodley of Uvalde gave us a few words of interest. Especially to Attorney Brown on the Ethics of Luncheon Clubs hoping that he might carry them back to Devine with him.

Everyone was urged to be present Thursday evening and hear Colonel Hubert A. White, Judge Advocate of the 8th Corp Area.

ST. PAUL'S LUTHERAN CHURCH NOTES.

Program for Sunday, August 11: Sunday School at 9:15. German Service at 10:30. English Service at 8:00.

At the evening service the pastor will deliver the second of the series of lectures on the Life of Christ according to the Four Gospels.

On Wednesday evening, August 21, at 8:00 o'clock the Luther League will give a program culminating in a one-act play and a social on the church lawn.

On Sunday, August 25, the Lutheran congregations of Knippa, New Fountain, Quihi and Castroville will meet with St. Paul's congregation of Hondo to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the publication of Luther's Small Catechism. By means of this celebration we desire to glorify the Bible as the inspired Word of God. Luther's catechism is simply the main teachings of the Bible in short form, for which reason it has often been referred to as "the little Bible." It has been published more than any other book in the world except the Bible. It is one of the confessional books of the Lutheran church throughout the world. It is an interesting fact that Luther's catechism was the first book printed in America. Details of the celebration will be announced later.

All are cordially invited to attend all the services mentioned above, as well as to worship with us at all times.

H. A. HEINEKE, Pastor.

Mrs. Andrew Schuehle and children wish to thank any and every one for their loving kindness and tender sympathy in the sudden death of their beloved husband and father, and especially the pastor and singers and those who sent flowers without card and the Masons for their beautiful service.

Aside of a number of interesting social features, a fine program has been arranged with a number of choice musical selections, a German and an English address by good speakers and other entertaining numbers. All are invited to this social.

Last Sunday morning the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Martin received the sacrament of holy baptism in Bethlehem Lutheran church. The little lady received the name of Vernal Annie and has as her sponsors Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin DeGroot. The event was duly celebrated by relatives and friends at the farm home of the maternal grandparents of the child, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Neumann.

Just now Bethlehem Lutheran congregation is trying to arrange, with the Lutheran congregations of Castroville, Hondo and Knippa, an exceptionally interesting program for 400th anniversary of the publication of Dr. Martin Luther's Catechism Sunday, August 25. This very interesting celebration is being celebrated in practically every Christian country in the world and in more than a hundred languages. The program of the day will be announced as soon as possible.

EPIGRAMS OF EPICURES

THAT Jean Anthelme Brillat-Savarin, famous author of The Physiology of Taste, came by his love for good food honestly is indicated by a story which he tells about one of his aunts who, at the age of ninety-seven, was dying. But as she lay in bed she insisted on eating her regular eight-course dinner. She had almost finished when, "I feel that I am going," said the old lady. "Quick, my dessert!"

The Joyous Gourmand

In Brillat-Savarin's day, the word, gourmand, signified one who loved good food. Consequently the author coined such epigrams as: "A true gourmand could not be late to dinner." And, "No man of under forty can be dignified with the title of gourmand."

Today, a distinction is made between the words, gourmand and gourmet. Gourmand has changed from its old meaning and implies that a man is a prodigious eater without discrimination. A gourmet is one who eats of only the finest. Or, as Frank Sullivan, puts it, "A gourmet is one who always likes to know just what he is eating. A gourmand is one who will order hash."

A sentence by Oliver Wendell Holmes gives a tinge of suspicion that he was a gourmand, but it seems difficult to believe such a thing of the urbane doctor. Yet there is no denying that he says, "The true essentials of a feast are only fun and food." And that Thackeray must have been a gourmand or else have suffered from indigestion is the conclusion from his remark that New Orleans is the place where one could eat the most and suffer the least.

In Brillat-Savarin's day cooking was a fine art. The chefs had their names written on the menu cards and great lords and ladies did not scruple to add their names to any dish which they originated. The famous Duke de Richelieu; Louis de Bechameil, Marquis de Nointel; are some of the famous names. The Marchioness de Pompadour invented the filet de volaille à la Bellevue. A special method of preparing sweetbreads is called sweetbreads à la d'Artois, after the Count d'Artois who afterwards became Charles X of France.

Noble Cooking by Nobility

Today, the nobility is interested in other pursuits—often the prosaic one of money-making—but there still are lovers of good eating who make a practice of evolving new recipes and so bringing to mind Brillat-Savarin's old pronouncement that "The discovery of a new dish is more beneficial to humanity than the discovery of a new star." Some of these super-celestial discoveries are given below for your delectation.

Swedish Peanut Wafers: Cream one-half cup butter and one-half cup sugar and cream again. Add one well-beaten egg and one and one-third cups sifted flour and a few grains of salt. Add one-fourth teaspoon lemon extract and roll very thin. Cut in small rounds, press a peanut in the center of each and bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees F. for eight to ten minutes.

As Good As Li French

Scandinavian Prune Pudding: Remove stones from the fruit in a number 3 can of Oregon prunes. Cut pulp in pieces and return to the syrup, add one-third cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon clove and one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon and simmer five minutes. Mix one-third cup cornstarch with one-half cup orange juice, add to hot mixture and cook in double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture is thick and smooth. Cool slightly, add one-half cup cooked nut meats and fold in two stiffly-beaten egg whites. Pour into wet molds and chill. Serve with whipped cream or custard sauce.

Fig Tapioca: Soak one-half cup pearl tapioca over night in cold water. In the morning drain off any water which has not been absorbed. Scald one and one-third cups milk in a double boiler, add the tapioca and cook twenty minutes or until transparent. Add two slightly beaten egg yolks and one-fourth cup brown sugar and cook until thick. Then add figs from an eight-ounce can (or one cup of canned figs) and let cook a few minutes longer. Cool slightly, then fold in two stiffly-beaten egg whites. Serve cold.

WE SOMETIMES PROFIT BY OUR MISTAKES.

By Mrs. Irvin Pickle.

We rarely see reports of failures in the poultry business. This is likely to discourage the amateur causing him to think he is the only one who has made a failure. Many times one profits by mistakes and accumulates valuable information that proves helpful in future undertakings.

Recently I obtained the following little story first hand from a little lady in Smith County, Texas, who last summer had her first experience with chickens.

When she was growing up there were no 4-H clubs. Her time was spent learning readin', writin' and 'rithmetic, while mother raised the chickens. She became a teacher, later married a city man and only last summer though now a middle aged woman, raised her first chickens.

In August she ordered 100 baby chicks of mixed breeds from a well-known northern hatchery paying $7 for the 100.

Before the arrival of the chicks a small house 7x7 feet with concrete floor was made ready to receive them.

August 26, the chicks arrived healthy and lively. No heat was required for the little house. Commercial chick starter and chick grains were fed till the chicks were 5 or 6 weeks old. Then they were gradually changed to growing mash and grains.

All went well and it seemed to the little woman that her first poultry venture was going to be a success. One night stray cats got into the little house and killed 30 chicks. A big rain came and in some way water got into the house resulting in a dampness that caused the remainder of the flock to develop roup. Forty-two chicks died and all the others were badly infected before a successful remedy was found. She tried everything suggested by her obliging and sympathetic neighbors, but not until she tried ordinary laundry bluing did she get the disease checked.

She made a soft mop and swabbed their heads twice with the bluing. Not another chick died and in a few days all the sick ones were well.

28 survived till 3 months old. These were marketed at 50 cents each making a total of $14.00. Counting the initial cost of chicks, cost of feed, etc. $7.00 was lost besides the time spent in caring for them.

This woman doesn't count it a loss. Her ardor isn't the least bit dampened. She intends to try again this year and she believes her experience and mistakes of last year will contribute greatly to her success.

CONTROL COLDS BY CONTROLLING HEAT.

It's a funny thing about colds. We don't often think much of them, and even some doctors belittle our troubles with clogged heads. But it is now generally accepted by most of the medical profession that colds are the source of many other illnesses, and may lead to serious complications.

Every home owner has heard about heat control from his architect, his furnace man, or someone else. These devices which keep our houses heated evenly at seventy degrees are always called "heat controlling mechanisms." We seldom think of them as "cold controllers."

Vaccination is urged for the control of smallpox and inoculation for other diseases, and now far-sighted physicians urge heat control for cold prevention.

Thermostats for controlling the furnace have been manufactured for more than forty years, but often have been sold only for the comfort and convenience advantages with not so much stress on the health value. The modern tendency to demand healthy surroundings, however, has given more emphasis to this aspect of automatic heat control.

CARD OF THANKS.

To our neighbors and friends whose acts of kindness and words of sympathy brought such comfort to us in our hour of sorrow when we came to give up our beloved husband and father our hearts go out in grateful thanks. We especially thank Rev. Nelson, the pallbearers and all who sent the many beautiful flowers.

Gratefully yours,
Mrs. L. H. Crabtree and Children.

GEO. SCHUEHLE, Manager

Pennsylvania Village Receives $2,000,000 "Town Hall" As Gift From "Chocolate King"

Hershey, Pa.—Adding another to his long list of "practical" philanthropies, Milton S. Hershey, the "Chocolate King," has just announced the gift of a $2,000,000 structure of classic design that is to become the community center for the twenty-five hundred residents of this town.

Including the cost of the new community center, Mr. Hershey's "investments" in the health and happiness of his neighbors now totals, at a conservative estimate, at least $65,000,000.

The work of excavating the large tract required for the new building is under way. Six stories high and occupying a plot 400 by 250 feet, the structure will be of Italian Renaissance design. It will feature a terraced, formal court, containing a decorative pool and promenades bordered by flower beds.

Contains Bachelor Quarters

Although it is entirely new in many of its details the Hershey community center actually is the realization and outgrowth of an idea

Milton S. Hershey

Terraced Court and Main Wing of New Community Building

Hershey's policy of "helping others help themselves."

The bachelor residents of the center will be provided for with 150 dormitories and apartments. One of the principal features will be a modern theater with seating capacity of 2500. There also will be a second, "little" theater for church, agriculture and other social gatherings.

Has Club Facilities

The first floor will contain, in addition, a public library and club rooms, large gymnasium with bleachers raised from the floor, swimming pool, dining room, lecture and study halls. On the second floor, besides the theatre balcony will be exhibition rooms, separate quarters for fencing and boxing, hand ball courts and other recreational facilities, while on the top floor will be a completely equipped community hospital and sun-deck. The entire project is to be operated as a community benefit with unusually low charges for individual accommodations.

Mr. Hershey has had in mind for a number of years. That is, some practical provision for the boys who, having completed their training at the Hershey Industrial School, choose to remain and work in the industries of the town. This was the primary thought out of which this unique establishment has grown. It is another manifestation of Mr.
